

Dear Justin,

I was watching you this morning while you slept and I realized something. I realized that I couldn't find a flaw with you. Okay, I know that you do have flaws, I am not deluding myself into thinking that you don't. But the point is that I feel that you are perfect for me (I hope you think so, as well) and that you make me feel like I am complete. Not that <sup>every</sup> woman needs a man to feel complete (so ~~fitting~~ fitting) I have spent my entire life up until I met you convincing myself that I didn't need or want anybody in my life. You changed all that. I made a decision when I said yes to your marriage proposal and that was that. ~~I~~ you were the one person that I would want in my life forever. That was what saying yes meant to me. I'm not sure what else to say but I always seem to have more to write. I ~~do~~ know we Will be together forever. I want to seem really confident there ever though there always seems to be a small part of me that says I'm crazy because you don't seem to think the same but I do want to be with you forever because I seriously doubt I could find anybody better for me than you and I never want to try to.

I love you always and forever.

Shastone White Sage

Dear Justin,

I feel I should explain myself from Thursday so as to assure you that you are not living with a psycho-suicidal person. I don't believe I would have killed myself, well at least intentionally. I truly did want to die when it happened. But I probably would have just curled up and starved myself. And the lovely wrist thing was basically the if-you have a headache drop a hammer on your toe it will make the headache go away (by concentration on another pain the first one will stop). I just wanted the horrible agonising pain of us breaking up to go away. There are no words to describe the pain that I felt. Hopefully I will never feel it again. I know we have problems but we will work them out, I have confidence in that.

I don't believe that I am really as weak as I let on, the pain just made me feel like I was because I thought that you weren't feeling anything like what I was feeling.

~~Love you~~

I Love you Justin always.

Anastasia

Dear Justin,

I just thought I would let you know something, and since I am not good at bringing anything up in conversation I thought I would write it. Okay I am not really sure exactly what you are deciding. Maybe that is the problem, but what I ~~am~~ have grasped about what you are deciding it seems to be whether you are either going to dump me or you want me enough to possibly (?) keep me forever. Now if this is what you are deciding then I should tell you ~~that~~ now that I am not sure how much I trust you anymore. I keep remembering how you sometimes said that you want to keep me forever and once you said it would be really ~~to~~ for me to eventually be pregnant with your child. Once you even asked me to marry you and I had asked you before I said yes if you really meant it and you said yes. But now it appears that it was never true so how I don't know whether to trust you or not since you know seem to be going back on most of what you said. I really don't know what to think anymore. I love you so much.

Shawbana